Comparison With The Past

Most of us fail to realize, until comparisons are made with generations of the past, how far we have advanced in living standards. A bank in Minneapolis presents a set of figures which offers a striking illustration. Just 100 years ago, the bank reports, a household of three persons had an average annual income of about $1100 in terms of dollar values of 1935. The same size family in 1935, by contrast, averaged $4800, which means that it was able to buy more than four times the goods and services of its forebears of four generations before.

This gain appears even more remarkable when evaluated in the light of the inflation that has taken place in late years, and has depreciated the dollar by nearly half. It is a testimonial to this country's fabulous achievement in increasing the productive power of the people. The material miracle of mass production is only a part of this vast improvement in the general welfare. Mass production would have been a small monument unless there had been developed a comparable system of getting the goods of the consumers who wanted them and would use them. That system was developed and we call it mass distribution. Mass distribution involves many things, including transportation and the merchant and dealer out-lets which often receive small

CONCRETE INTERSTATE SYSTEM ROADS WILL Save Money FOR TAXPAYERS IN GEORGIA

Federal funds will pay 90% of the building costs of the great new National System of Interstate and Defense Highways. This state pays the other 10%—and pays all maintenance cost forever. That's why taxpayers favor the use of durable concrete for these roads. Concrete maintenance costs are lower—much lower than the annual maintenance cost of the next most commonly built type pavement.

And since maintenance costs come out of your state's highway budget, the use of low-maintenance-cost concrete leaves more money in the highway fund to build other urgently needed new roads.

HERMAN TALMADGE OUT OF THE PAST Part Fact—Part Fancy

WASHINGTON
The principal argument advanced in favor of federal aid for education is that state and local governments cannot handle the schools they need for themselves.

The fallacy in that contention is that it is the same taxpayer who must foot the bill regardless of the level at which the program is undertaken. Furthermore, there is less aid to be had from the federal level because the cost of administering the program as well as the carelessness attitude of federal bureaucrats removed from actual scrutiny and control.

GEORGIA HAS PROVIDED by her example with the State School Building Authority program inaugurated during her Administration as Governor that it is possible for individual states to build the schools they need without the help of the Federal Government. Any other state wishing to measure up to its responsibility can do likewise.

As any state official who has had experience with federal-aid programs can attest, federal standards and federal controls always follow federal money. That has been true of the various programs it is the duty of the federal government to administer.

OUT OF THE PAST Part Fact—Part Fancy

The results of an action are usually of long duration. This is especially true about the results of war. It took our Southland a half century to arouse itself from the torpid condition into which four years of war had sunk her, but in that long half-century we learned many things.

We learned to work. Best of all, we learned that work is something dignified and ennobling. There were drosses who had to die off, placed at $50,000 according to the statement recently received to all states in the Union for educational purposes.

There were the words of Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University—the same Dwight D. Eisenhower, as president of the United States, is urging the enactment of the same program which other states wish to measure up to its responsibility can do likewise.

How Do You Volunteer For CD?

By Max Lockwood
Director, Statesboro and Bulloch County
Your newspaper, radio or civil defense organization will be glad to tell you. Also you can watch a demonstration from your local civil defense director. Or you can phone or visit your local civil defense headquarters.

Right now your Red Cross chapter is ready to train you in first aid. This training will be repeated at all civil defense volunteer centers. But whether or not you are able to volunteer, you should take the latest Red Cross first-aid course. Home nursing and nurse-aid courses are given by the Red Cross, too. These courses may save a life in your family some day, war or no war.

In addition, the Red Cross needs blood donors. Thousands of pints of blood and plasma would be needed after an enemy attack. The Red Cross is in charge of this part of the civil defense program. Next week: What service can you join?

What I don't write is something I haven't yet clearly thought out. I learned to work. Best of all, we learned that work is something dignified and ennobling.
